As part of our continuing supply chain research, Penn State University, Capgemini Consulting, Penske, and KornFerry would appreciate your participation in our 2016 Third Party Logistics Study. Each year, many supply chain executives participate in our survey, and this year, it is especially worth your time to participate:

- All participants are eligible to receive an advance copy of our report prior to its general release in September of this year.
- Everyone’s opinion counts - this year’s study incorporates the views of users, non-users, and providers of third-party logistics services.
- This year’s study includes several special topics including the 3PL competitive landscape, labor shortage, and multi-enterprise relations, which are sure to shape every company’s future supply chain strategies.

Please take 15 minutes of your time, and share your insights with us! This survey is being conducted exclusively using the Internet. Please log onto the URL listed below to participate in the survey.

Please keep this email on file. If for any reason you need to leave the survey, you can re-enter by clicking on the link in this message.

We will additionally be holding three workshops to present, discuss, and reflect on the topics and results of this year’s survey. If you are interested in joining one of these three workshops in Chicago, Rio de Janeiro or Sydney, please see the attached invitation or email Melissa.hadhazy@capgemini.com for more information.

Thank you in advance for your participation in this study.

C. John Langley Jr., Ph.D.

Professor of Supply Chain Management
